Anti-corporate protests coming to Canada; police arrest dozens

OTTAWA (AFP) - Rallies inspired by anti-corporate demonstrators in New York were planned for at least 15 Canadian cities today, organizers announced online.

Thousands of people are expected to attend the protests in Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, the capital Ottawa and other major cities, according to organizers' Facebook pages and Twitter messages.

"We want to come together to say that in a world of such wealth, there is no need for such economic disparity. There is no need for so many people to go without," Katie Harris, who is involved in the movement, was quoted as saying by public broadcaster CBC.

Organizers who held planning meetings in cities across the country Thursday reportedly called the day of action "leaderless" and "non-violent."

Social movements in Europe, upset over the recent round of austerity measures that cut into public spending, are also scheduled to protest in countries across the continent today.

Kalle Lasn, one of the brains behind the Occupy Wall Street movement, said from the office of his magazine, Adbusters, that the U.S. movement could join forces with other European protests scheduled for the weekend.

Meanwhile, yesterday US police arrested dozens of anti-Wall Street protesters across the country, but New York backed off plans to evict an unauthorized camp in the Financial District.

Most arrests were in the western United States, where the protests spread from New York.

In Denver, 23 people were detained, Sergeant Mike Baker from the Colorado State Patrol told AFP, after 135 officers moved in early yesterday to evict protesters camped out in front of the state Capitol building.

Fox News reported brief scuffles, but no injuries.

Ten others were arrested in Seattle, Washington, and another man in San Diego, California, police there said.

In New York, a tense confrontation between the country's biggest protest camp and police ended when plans were called off to forcibly clean the square.

Hundreds of protesters have been camped out on the square for four weeks and the police order to evacuate during the cleaning was seen as a ruse to ensure their eviction.

At the final hour, the owners of the Zuccotti Park plaza said they were delaying the cleaning and that protesters could stay for now.

An impromptu celebration march to nearby Wall Street ended with scuffles and 14 arrests when protesters ignored police instructions to remain on the sidewalks so as not to impede traffic, the New York Police Department said.

This marred what was seen as a surprise victory for the largely peaceful demonstrators, many of whom stayed up all night cleaning the plaza themselves, in order to demonstrate that there was no need for the owners to intervene.

Brookfield Properties, which owns the site, "believes they can work out an arrangement with the protesters that will ensure the park remains clean, safe, available for public use," Deputy Mayor Cas Holloway said.

Red Devils seen popping up at Dutch Village!

The Devils with the ESPN memorial banner from the Giants game

For 29 years the Divi/Tamarijn Resorts have welcomed a group of visitors who came to be known as the Red Devils, named for a toxic concoction devised by the chief trouble maker himself, Joe Campisi. The group nearly all bought timesharing at the Dutch Village Resort when it was under construction, and long, lazy afternoons by the pool were enlivened by copious consumption of Joe's drink, consisting of Sloe Gin, Vodka, Triple Sec, Amaretto, Southern Comfort, rum and lime juice; phew!

Prime Minister of Aruba at OAS: Cooperation on Security Essential for the Prosperity of His Country

On Wednesday, October 12, Prime Minister of Aruba, Mike Eman, held a lecture at the Thirty-third Policy Round Table of the Organization of American States (OAS). During his speech he said that current conditions of prosperity in his country would not be possible without the security ties it shares with the Kingdom of the Netherlands, the United States and other governments of the region.

The Caribbean leader was the keynote speaker at the debate titled, "Peace and Security: the Kingdom of the Netherlands in the Caribbean; its geo-strategic importance in advancing security in the region," in which he was joined by the Naval Attaché and Assistant Defense Attaché for the Netherlands in the United States, Jos Coumans; the OAS Secretary for Multidimensional Security, Ambassador Adam Blackwell; and the Chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board (IDB), Guy Thibault.

On the issue of security in the Caribbean, Prime Minister Eman said that "when you look at the peace and security in Aruba and the opportunity to prosper because of this security, you could as politicians take the credit for making these choices, but in reality if you look at the circumstances this credit should be given to the people of Aruba." "If you look at what hinders international cooperation on security in other countries, the answer is the sense of autonomy and sovereignty that countries and peoples cling to," and that is why they don't give their authorities the space necessary to enter into agreements that allow for greater cooperation on matters of security, he emphasized.

In the case of his country, he continued, "the people of Aruba have chosen to maintain relations with the Dutch Kingdom in order to have foreign affairs, defense, and legal security all arranged on a broader base in order to secure objectivity and effective enforcement to confront these worldscale and international threats."

In the case of other countries, he said, if the electorate is not willing to give its authorities "the necessary space" to enter into international agreements, it will be difficult to implement effective visions on security.

As examples of the cooperation that Aruba has developed with the Netherlands and other governments of the region, Prime Minister Eman mentioned the efforts against drug trafficking, a coast guard system based on cooperation with other countries, and collaboration with the United States Border Patrol. "Our geographic location definitely gives us challenges to secure our borders," he asserted. "Aruba is at the front of the South American coast, we know that is where many of the drugs come from, and we are between the markets in the upper North and the producers down South, and being in between we have the natural challenge to keep the territory safe and to keep other territories safe," he added.

For his part, the OAS Secretary for Multidimensional Security, Adam Blackwell, recalled that the relation between Aruba and the Netherlands "is of great interest to the OAS, since geographically the Caribbean island is part of our Hemisphere." In this sense, he recalled that the hemispheric Organization "is building a multidimensional platform" on security, and mentioned some of the areas in which it is currently working on: customs and border control in the Caribbean, maritime and aviation security, money laundering, trafficking in people, firearms marking and tracing, prevention and combating human trafficking, and inter-American police training.

The Naval Attaché and Assistant Defense Attaché for the Netherlands in the United States, Jos Coumans, offered a presentation on the role played by the military and civilian forces of his country in strengthening security in Aruba and the Caribbean region. In particular, he noted that among the principal tasks are the promotion of regional stability and security, support for civilian authorities, maritime security and maritime law enforcement, and he added that regional cooperation includes ties to the governments of the United States, Dominican Republic, Grenada, Barbados, Trinidad and Tobago, Colombia, Venezuela, and Suriname, among others.

The Chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board (IADB), Guy Thibault, recalled that the subject of security is essential to guaranteeing progress among the pillars of development of nations, and advocated for the creation of a comprehensive approach that links the military forces of different countries. In particular, he insisted on greater information and intelligence sharing, especially during crises; maintaining and deepening relations to ensure that the IADB is connected; confidence- and security-building measures among the countries; and improving preparation and capacity-building to enhance response in situations of emergency.

The OAS Policy Round Table program, launched in 2007, seeks to enrich the discussion of the hemispheric agenda by bringing together political analysts and members of the diplomatic community to talk about the principal issues affecting the region. The event was held in the Hall of the Americas at OAS headquarters in Washington, DC, and included a question and answer session.

14 Bis...setting a new standard for airport eateries

The official opening of the chic and affordable 14 Bis at the Reina Beatrix International Airport has made departing early for a flight a very attractive proposition for travelers. The masterminds behind this charming new dining spot, veteran restaurateurs Stefen Leggers and Sander van Kints, welcomed Aruba's Minister of Tourism, Transport and Labor, Otmar Oduber along with AAA CEO Peter Steinmentz to perform the ribbon cutting on their official opening Thursday morning.

Stefan and Sander are well known for other highly successful culinary partnerships, and it looks like they will be able to carve another notch for the innovative 14 Bis. The name is derived from the first aircraft, the 14-bis, on October 23, 1906 by the aristocratic Brazilian inventor/adventurer, Albert Santos Dumont, whose visage is the logo of the new restaurant. A model of his plane is a striking centerpiece to the interior décor.

Open from 6:00 AM to 8:00 PM seven days a week, the menu sports a fresh, healthy and diverse selection of soups, gourmet sandwiches and wraps, sushi, plus omelet and pasta stations, where your meal is prepared before your eyes. 14 Bis deploys a freeflowing, self service style for fast in-and-out, or patrons can linger and take advantage of the wi-fi hotspot, without charge.

Chefs Gilbert and Jose provided samples of their tempting dishes such as Pasta Carbonara with Chicken, Grouper Teriyaki with vegetables, which barely scratches the surface. Customers can also express their seasoning preferences and any dietary issues as they prepare your order.

Very affordably priced, the new eatery is not your typical airport fare, and the intention is for it to be a stand alone restaurant, with clients provided free parking in the airport lot.

"It has been a wonderful 29 years, with many landmark occasions," recall Joe, who proudly dubbed Dutch Village Activities Hostess Hilda Mills an honorary "Red Devil" as she has provided them with so much personal attention and good company over the years.

"At one point our ranks had swelled to 134, wearing our signature tee shirts and sharing anniversary and birthday celebrations, as well as a group recognition by Aruba as "Ambassadors of Goodwill," Joe told THE MORNING NEWS. "However, the years have taken their toll, and now we are down to about 34 who still return regularly." They even received a shout out from ESPN on their silver anniversary of coming to Aruba during a Giants game, a team of which a number of the devils are fans, and the announcers knew the group would be tun-

Board Members of Aruba's Youth Parliament

Horacio E. Oduber Hospital Emergency Response Team, board members organized a 2-day Safety and Security Conference at the Renaissance Convention Center over Thursday and Friday, October 13 and 14.

conference The brought attention to a diversity of topics related to Mass Trauma Control and community violence; organizers chose this date as it was also International Fire Prevention Week.

Justice and Education, One of the principal organizers Aruba's Minister of Arthur Dowers, opened James Fun of the hospital the conference early Thursday morning and addressed the topic "The Duties of the Ministry of Justice and Education Related to Safety and Security"

Among the international coterie of speakers were R. Kroniege, John Fun and F. LeBlanc of the Emergency Response Team opening the conference with a presentation of various aspects and operation of the hospital's ERT.

Others presenters examining the ramifications of performance excellence and the relation of mass trauma preparedness were Hospital Lab staffer Mrs. A. Croes and Director of the Aruba Trade and Industry Association, ATIA, Joyce Bartels-Daal, with Ms. A. Flemming and Mr. A.

Boekhoudt discussing "Evolution of Airport Security and Beyond" and "Setting Port Security Standards to Cope with Today's Reality," respectively.

The scope of the security conference was quite wide ranging, dealing with topics not only related to external threats to Aruba's tranquility, but the social problems which may result in disruption to the peaceful lawfulness of the island now and in the future. Educators from the island's vocational school, EPB, discussed the issue of not only providing schooling for youth that is more comfortable with a practical job-training education rather than abstract academics, but the fact that children with personality problems are often directed towards their school, and having to deal with it becoming a repository for youth with behavioral disorders. This was the principal topic of discussion during the morning sessions of the second day of the conference.

Afternoon sessions on the final day were almost instructional on the practical applications, with Mr. Michiel van Ewijk speaking on "Occupational Health & Safety Management Systems and a Caribbean Platform" and Fred Le Blanc and Mr. Kronieger addressing the organization of emergency response teams, followed by a workshop for the hundreds attending.

Organizers were pleased with the general response among hospital staff, hotel personnel and educators, but lamented the lack of attendance by police and fire department personnel. The motto of the conference was "We can make a Difference," and the topics examined how not only institutions, but the individuals who staff them, can cooperate to insure that communities are proactive in addressing the issues of mass trauma and violence.

US worries over China's underground nuclear network

WASHINGTON (AFP) - A leading US lawmaker who fears budget cuts could delay modernizing the US nuclear arsenal voiced concern yesterday about an extensive tunnel complex designed to house Chinese nuclear missiles.

"This network of tunnels could be in excess of 5,000 kilometers (3,110 miles), and is used to transport nuclear weapons and forces," said Michael Turner, who chairs a House Armed Services Committee panel focusing on strategic weapons and other security programs.

"As we strive to make our nuclear forces more transparent, China is building this underground tunnel system to make its nuclear forces even more opaque," he added, citing an unclassified Department of Defense report.

Experts also expressed their concern about the network, whose existence was revealed by official Chinese media in late 2009.

The tunnels would allow China to launch a nuclear counter-attack if it was hit by a nuclear strike. "It's almost mind-boggling," said Mark Schneider, senior analyst at the National Institute for Public Policy.

"It has enormous implications in terms of their view toward nuclear warfare, survivability of their systems and their leadership in the event of war.

"It is virtually impossible to target anything like that, irrespective of how many nuclear weapons you have," he added. Richard Fisher of the International Assessment and Strategy Center said the tunnel complex could allow the Chinese army to conceal its weapons.

"Do we really know how many missiles the Chinese have today?" he asked.

Turner expressed concern that planned cuts to the Pentagon could block efforts to modernize the US arsenal.

"We need to understand the potential long-term consequences of watching as Russia and China modernize their nuclear arsenal while we sit back and simply maintain our existing and aging nuclear forces," he warned.

Dutch court rejects Samsung suit against Apple

THE HAGUE (AFP) - A Dutch court yesterday rejected a bid by Samsung to ban sales of rival Apple's 3G phones and tablet devices, the latest round in a worldwide legal battle over alleged patent infringements.

The judges in District Court of The Hague rejected Samsung's request in a decision published online.

Samsung had argued that Apple had infringed patents on several aspects of its 3G, or third-generation, telephone technology.

The court acknowledged that the South Korean company did hold the patents in question, but said they met the criteria of technology that could be used by other companies.

The ruling noted that Samsung had in 1998 signed a declaration saying it was willing to grant such FRAND -- "fair, reasonable and non-discriminatory" -- licences.

Iran denies direct contact with US over alleged plot

TEHRAN (AFP) - Iran denied any direct contact with its arch-foe, the United States, over the alleged plot to kill the Saudi ambassador in Washington, a day after Washington unveiled existence of such contacts, media reported yesterday.

The Iranian mission to the United Nations denied "direct contact" between Iranian and American officials adding: "No such contacts have occurred," the ISNA and Fars news agencies reported.

"There are no such contacts, and this office has no information in this regard," local media added, quoting a statement by the Iranian mission.

On Thursday, State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland told reporters that Washington had "had direct contact with Iran," when asked about communication between the two sides, adding that this took place on Wednesday and not in Iran.

A senior US State Department official told reporters later that the contact took place at the US initiative.

Scottish siblings who had sex in lift spared jail

LONDON (AFP) - A brother and sister from Scotland who admitted having sex in a railway station lift escaped jail on Friday, although the court ruled that the young man should be put on the national register of sex offenders.

Former soldier Richard Finlayson, 21, and his younger sister Kirsty, 18, were caught in the act twice by security cameras at Motherwell station, outside Glasgow, on June 27 last year.

They had previously both pleaded guilty to committing incest and during sentencing at Hamilton Sheriff Court on Friday, the brother received a two-year probation order while the sister received a one-year probation order.

Richard Finlayson was also put on the sex offenders register because his sister was only 17 -- a minor -- at the time.

Kirsty Finlayson, who wore a bright purple Adidas tracksuit in court, will now receive mental health and substance abuse counselling, the court heard.

She had been living in a homeless hostel at the time and said she went to meet her brother to borrow some money when they ended up having sex. Richard Finlayson told the Sun it was a "moment of madness".

Sentencing them, Sheriff Ray Small said: "I'm sure you both understand that most rightminded members of society will find the details of this case unacceptable and difficult to comprehend."

Crisis cell treats students after teacher self-immolation

BEZIERS(AFP) - A psychological crisis cell was treating shocked students at a high school in southern France on Friday after a depressed maths teacher dramatically set herself on fire in the playground.

The school's principal said the teacher remained in "very worrying" condition after her suicide attempt on Thursday, as teachers' unions said her desperate act highlighted their difficult working conditions.

The 44-year-old teacher, whom French media have identified only as Lise B., doused herself in petrol during the morning break and set herself alight, a day after a stormy meeting with children in her class who found her teaching methods too strict, witnesses said.

Christian Philip, the principal at Jean Moulin secondary school in Beziers, southern France, said the school had reopened its doors on Friday morning but that classes remained suspended.

Traumatised students were being assisted by a psychological crisis cell, he said, and about 80 students had already been treated. The cell was to stay in place until at least Tuesday.

The teacher suffered third-degree burns and was taken from the school -- a huge institution housing 3,000 students and 280 teachers -- by helicopter to a specialist unit in the city of Montpellier's university teaching hospital.

Parents and pupils who spoke to AFP at the scene Thursday said the teacher had a difficult relationship with several pupils in her maths class and that a meeting with them to clear the air on Wednesday had become rowdy.

US man gets double hand transplant

BOSTON(AFP) - A US man spoke Friday of his happiness at the prospect of touching his young grandchildren for the first time, following a rare double hand transplant at a Boston hospital.

Richard Mangino, 65, lost his arms below the elbows and his lower legs from an infection in 2002. After a 12-hour operation by a 40-strong surgical team at Brigham and Women's Hospital -- best known for pioneering face transplants -- he got donated hands.

In his first remarks, he thanked the family of the donor.

"My family and I grieve for the loss of your loved one. I am humbled and overwhelmed with emotion. Thank you for this incredible gift," he said in a statement.

But Mangino said his main emotion now was happiness at the prospect of regaining a more normal life and, above all, the ability to play with his grandchildren.

"The one miracle I have prayed for, since my oldest grandson Trevor was born, was to be able to feel the sense of touch again. To touch his and Nicky's little faces, and stroke their hair, and to teach them to throw a ball. To me, that would be a miracle," he said in the statement.

"And today, my miracle has come true. And I am eternally grateful."

The father of three had until now used prosthetic limbs and had some success in living a normal existence, reportedly driving a car, playing guitar and using a computer.

However, those achievements were not easily managed. He told the-easily managed. He told thebostonchannel.com that the loss of one limb requires a person to use a quarter to a third more energy.

"So if you lose four limbs, then you can imagine: one of your days is like two days for me," he said.

"Just getting dressed before was a mountain. All those things I've been doing for the past nine years -- people would say you are a miracle. And I would tell them it took 25 or 30 miracles a day to be that person. "he told New England Cable News Friday.

The transplant involved delicate connection of skin, tendons, muscles, ligaments, bones and blood vessels.

Only 21 double hand transplants have previously been made around the world, with the first in the French city of Lyon in 2000, according to the International Registry on Hand and Composite Tissue Transplantation.

Simon Talbot, the lead surgeon, told MSNBC television that "the results so far have been an amazing success."

However, Mangino needs months of therapy and it will take at least half a year for him to regain a sense of touch, the surgeon said.

Apple fans scramble for new iPhone

CALIFORNIA (AFP) - Stores worldwide were gripped on Friday by the now familiar scene of gadget geeks scrambling for Apple's latest smartphone, the US giant's first new release since the death of cofounder Steve Jobs.

The iconic chief executive's death brought a more sombre air than usual to some of the Apple shops celebrating the launch of the iPhone 4S, with fans laying flowers alongside the long queues waiting for their chance to buy.

Apple users see themselves as an elite group, and their sense of community was boosted by the tributes for Jobs and by jokes about the debacle suffered by Apple rival Blackberry, whose mobile network was disrupted this week.

In Frankfurt, scuffles broke out in the queue as shoppers camped overnight, in Paris several of the most prized versions of the model sold out at dawn and in London more than 300 fans mobbed the brand's biggest store

Some love Apple's range of computers, smartphones and media tablets because they have changed the way consumers relate to technology. In some cases, they have changed users' entire way of life.

Others were still in awe of Jobs's achievement and in shock at his death.

In Paris, the Apple store had barriers in place to contain the crowds -- both locals and tourists -- who kept vigil overnight until its 8:00 am (0600 GMT) opening, when they rushed the shelves.

And in the United States, Jobs's Apple co-founder Steve Wozniak paid tribute to his collaborator by camping out overnight.

"The long wait begins. I'm first in line," Wozniak posted on his Twitter feed on Thursday from outside an Apple store in Los Gatos, California in the heart of Silicon Valley.

Friday's launch did not extend to all corners of the planet, but the phones themselves soon will.

The iPhone 4S is already a record-breaker for an Apple product, with more than one million sales in the first 24 hours of pre-orders last week.

Bidding to build on the proven track record of the best-selling smartphone, Apple says the latest iteration boasts faster speeds, a voice-controlled assistant called Siri and an improved camera.

For some it looks too similar to its predecessor, and many fans, investors and analysts were initially underwhelmed following its October 4 unveiling, but sales are expected to benefit from an outpouring of sympathy for Jobs.

The performance of the new iPhone will be seen as an early test for Apple's life after Jobs, the creative visionary whose death was mourned worldwide by government leaders, industry titans and ordinary fans alike.

France launches vast solar panel array

Solar panels are seen in in Les Mees, southern France.

PARIS (AFP) - France on Thursday launched its largestever solar energy farm, with an array of panels spread over about 200 hectares (500 acres) in the mountainous southern Alpes-de-Haute-Provence region.

With a production capacity of 90 megawatts, the vast photovoltaic park features nearly 113,000 solar panels and was built at a cost of 110 million euros ($137 million).

It has roughly the same surface area as the nearby principality of Monaco, an independent state.

"It is the largest solar site currently in service in France," Stephane Behr, the head of the project at French energy firm Eco Delta, said at the array's inauguration ceremony.

The launch comes as Europe increasingly seeks alternative energy sources amid rising global carbon emissions from fossil fuels and concerns over atomic energy in the wake of Japan's nuclear disaster.

Table salt used to boost digital storage: scientists

SINGAPORE (AFP) - Scientists in Singapore said Friday they have discovered a process that can expand the data storage capacity of computer hard disks six-fold using a common kitchen ingredient -- table salt.

The discovery was made by Singapore's national research institute the Agency for Science, Technology and Research, in collaboration with the National University of Singapore and the Data Storage Institute.

The institutions have "developed a process that can increase the data recording density of hard disks to 3.3 Terabits per square inch, six times the recording density of current models", they said in a statement.

"This means that a hard disk drive that holds 1 Terabyte (TB) of data today could, in the future, hold 6 TB of information in the same size using this new technology."

Scientists were able to boost data storage capacity by packing more bits -- miniature structures which hold information -- in neater patterns compared to the random configurations used in current hard disk drives.

"It's like packing your clothes in your suitcase when you travel. The neater you pack them the more you can carry," the statement said.

The method -- called bit patterning -- had previously not been feasible as scientists were unable to see the outlines of the bits clearly after they had been printed onto a film in a process much like developing photographs.

But adding table salt into the solution used for bit imaging allowed the outlines to stand out in sharp relief.

"It can give you a very high contrast. We are now able to see fine lines that would normally be blurred out," Joel Yang, the Singapore scientist who discovered the salty recipe, told AFP.

Yang predicted that the salted bit-patterning process will be adopted by the industry by 2016 "when the current techniques run out of fuel and (hard drive manufacturers) need to find alternate methods" of increasing data storage space.

Perry vows to unleash US energy boom

WASHINGTON (AFP) - Fading Republican 2012 candidate Rick Perry yesterday pledged to unleash a new economic boom by throwing open land and seas for oil drilling and tapping America's status as the "Saudi Arabia of coal."

The Texas governor tried to revive his presidential campaign with the first of a series of policy speeches, in which he pledged to swiftly create 1.2 million jobs in a wholesale rejection of Obama-era energy policies."America needs jobs. America needs energy. America needs a made-in-America energy revolution," Perry told steel workers in the gritty city of Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania, a vital general election swing

"We must get America working again. And a big part of the solution is right under our feet and right off our coasts. We're standing on top of the next American economic boom, and it's the energy underneath this country."

Perry's plan to harness fossil fuels will likely horrify the environmental lobby, which has been critical of even President Barack Obama's failure to act more aggressively to back a more concerted policy to tackle global warming.

But the Texas governor rejected the idea that the United States must make a choice between exploiting its energy resources and protecting the environment.

Perry accused the federal

Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) of waging a "war on American fossil fuel production" and argued the energy industry was better regulated by state and local authorities.

Perry promised to open gas and oil fields for exploration in the Gulf of Mexico, Alaska, including in the Arctic National Wildlife Reserve, and off the coast of Virginia and to do more to tap energy stocks in America's interior.

"The American economy shouldn't be beaten into the ground, when greater energy independence and lower energy costs lie right under American soil. It's time to end the over-regulation, excess litigation, and bureaucratic intimidation," Perry said.

European banks need 300 bn euros capital

PARIS (AFP) - New bank stress tests that Europe's banking regulator may undertake could reveal the need to inject nearly 300 billion euros ($410 billion) into lenders, analysts at Goldman Sachs said yesterday.

Analysts at the US investment bank ran a simulation using the macroeconomic assumptions the European Banking Authority used in its summer stress tests, while reducing value of bond holdings of weakened eurozone states.

Goldman Sachs estimated losses of 60 percent on Greek bonds, 40 percent on Irish and Portuguese bonds, and 20 percent on Italian and Spanish bonds.

It also required banks to have core capital buffer of nine percent, the higher level the EBA plans to require European banks to hold according to a European source.

Sixty-eight of the 91 banks the EBA reviews would fail the test, showing a capital shortfall of 298 billion euros, Goldman Sachs said.

Even major French and German banks would be tripped up by such a test.

France's BNP Paribas would need 13.0 billion euros in capital, Societe Generale 11.6 billion while Germany's Deutsche Bank would need 12.2 billion and Commerzbank 10.7 billion.

Goldman Sachs said bank recapitalisations alone would not solve the eurozone's problems, but needed "to be accompanied by simultaneous policy action aimed at steadying the value of sovereign debt."

Without sovereign debt regaining its risk free status "the bank sector will remain destabilised in our view."

The EBA has confirmed it is collecting updated information from banks but not that it is carrying out new tests, let alone what scenario would be used.

European officials are working on a scenario of a 50 percent haircut on Greek but there has been no talk of restructuring debt from any other eurozone countires.

WASHINGTON (AFP) - The

higher in fiscal 2011

US budget deficit edged slightly higher in fiscal 2011 but shrank in terms of its size relative to the economy's output, the Treasury Department said yesterday.

The shortfall rose 0.4 percent in the year ended September 30 from a year ago, to $1.299 trillion, the department said in releasing the details of the fiscal 2011 budget results.

That marked the secondhighest gap in US history after the record $1.416 trillion hit in 2009 when the government poured cash into the recessionwracked economy.

As a percentage of gross domestic product, the budget picture improved.

The deficit was 8.7 percent of GDP in the 2011 fiscal year, down from 9.0 percent in fiscal

"The FY 2011 deficit remained elevated as a result of the continued effects of the financial crisis in 2008 and 2009, which have put a persistent strain on federal revenues and outlays," the Treasury and the White House said in a joint ASHE EloN SEND statement.

"The slight uptick in the nominal deficit from last year was due to higher outlays that were nearly offset by higher receipts," they said.

The federal government's receipts rose 6.5 percent from fiscal 2010, to $2.302 trillion. The increase brought receipts to 15.4 percent of GDP, compared with 15.1 percent the prior year.

Outlays rose 4.2 percent from a year ago, to $3.601 trillion, and were unchanged from the prior year at 24.1 percent of

Parents Guide to Skin Protection

It's important to protect your children's skin from the damaging effects of the sun. No matter hazy or overcast days. what they're doing or what time of year it is, if they are outdoors, they need to be protected.

Aruba is one of the places in the world where the sun is the strongest. Located only 12.5 degrees north of the equa- and the surrounding tender tor, the sun shines with maxi-skin. mum strength and penetrates the atmosphere with a maximum amount of UV rays. What most people don't know on water and sand, which means that even in the shade you need protection.

Protecting the skin from the sun during childhood and adolescence is important in reducing cancer risks later in life. By building safe sun habits into your family's daily routine, you will make your children understand and get used to being protected against the sun and they will become more aware of the harmful effects it can have to their skin. Parents should take the lead by giving the good example; children will respond better when they see their parents protecting their skin as well.

Important recommendations:

•Wear protective clothing when out in the sun. Choose shirts and slacks made of tightly woven fabrics that you can't see through when held up to light.

Tigers use long ball to stave off elimination

DETROIT (AFP) - The Detroit Tigers staved off elimination in the Major League Baseball playoffs Thursday by beating the Texas Rangers 7-5 despite Nelson Cruz's record fifth homer of the series.

The Tigers narrowed the gap in the best-of-seven American League championship series to 3-2. The winner of the series will face the National League champion in the World Series.

Lions face 49ers in battle of resurgent teams

Calvin Johnson(notes) #81 of the Detroit Lions tries to break a tackle by Charles Tillman(notes) #33 of the Chicago Bears.

LOS ANGELES (AFP) - The once woeful Detroit Lions will try to match their best NFL season start in 55 years on Sunday, but will face a tough test from another resurgent team in the San Francisco 49ers.

The Lions defeated Chicago 24-13 on Monday to stretch their record to 5-0 for the first time since 1956.

Now they'll try to match their 6-0 start of that year -which 23-year-old Lions quarterback Matthew Stafford noted was not only before he was born but before his mother was born.

The Lions haven't made the

Hopkins hopes age isn't obstacle against Dawson

LOS ANGELES (AFP) -Bernard Hopkins says being the underdog has its advantages as he seeks to extend his reign as the oldest world champion in boxing history today.

Hopkins will face fellow American Chad Dawson (30-1 with 17 knockouts) for Hopkins' World Boxing Council light-heavyweight title at Staples Center arena.

"I am the underdog because of my age," said the 46-yearold boxing warrior who is 525 with two drawn and 32 knockouts. "I never operate well when I am the favourite in a fight."

Former world champion Dawson, 29, plans to dethrone Hopkins and reclaim his WBC playoffs since 1999 and haven't won an NFL title since 1957.

Their coveted "Monday Night Football" slot against Chicago was their first in a decade.

Their success -- coinciding with the Detroit Tigers' run to baseball's American League Championship Series -- has been greeted euphorically in a city hit hard by tough economic times.

The Lions say they're proud to represent the resiliency of Detroit, but can't afford to lose their focus.

In San Francisco they'll be up against a 49ers team off to their best start in nine years.

The NFC West division leaders pummelled Tampa

Bay 48-3 last week to improve to 4-1 -- a welcome contrast to their 0-5 start last season.

San Francisco will be without receiver Joshua Morgan, who broke his lower right leg in the rout of Tampa Bay, while opening day starter Braylon Edwards is still recover.

While the Lions and 49ers have been the revelations of the season, it's not such a surprise to see reigning Super Bowl champions Green Bay unbeaten.

The Packers will be favored to improve their 5-0 record when they host winless St. Louis.

Quarterback Aaron Rodgers rallied the Packers past Atlanta on Sunday.

"It was a choppy game but we persevered," Rodgers said. "We expect to win when we take the field."

Sunday's other games find Jacksonville at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia at Washington, Carolina at Atlanta, Indianapolis at Cincinnati, Buffalo at the New York Giants, Houston at Baltimore, Cleveland at Oakland, Dallas at New England, New Orleans at Tampa Bay and Minnesota at Chicago.

On Monday, the New York Jets host Miami, while Arizona, Denver, Kansas City, San Diego, Seattle and Tennessee have the week off.

Wolf's Brewers level playoff series

Randy Wolf #43 of the Milwaukee Brewers.

ST. LOUIS (AFP) - Veteran Randy Wolf pitched the biggest game of his 12-year Major League Baseball career, lifting Milwaukee to a 4-2 win over St. Louis to level their playoff series at 2-2 Thursday.

Wolf tossed seven innings, giving up just two runs as he outsmarted the Cardinals' batters despite surrendering two solo home runs.

It was the longest postseason game for left hander Wolf who got his first playoff victory at age 35.

"It was the biggest game I have ever pitched in and the biggest win of my career," Wolf said. "I was thankful to just get another chance to be out here and pitch a game."

Ryan Braun also had two hits for the Cardinals, who were desperately trying to avoid going down 3-1 in the best-of-seven series. Braun singled home the go-ahead run in the fifth inning.

"It feels good to know that we're at least going to get to go back home," said Braun. Matt Holliday and Allen Craig homered for the Cardinals, representing their only runs in the last 16 innings.

Wolf said he threw two good pitches to Holliday and Craig but the Cardinal batters just outfoxed him at that mo-

Brewers reliever Francisco Rodriguez allowed a hit in the eighth and John Axford finished for his second save of the series and third in the National League playoffs.

"He's been one of our leaders here," Braun said of Wolf. The Brewers ended an eightgame on-the-road losing streak in the playoffs dating to the 1982 World Series opener at St. Louis.

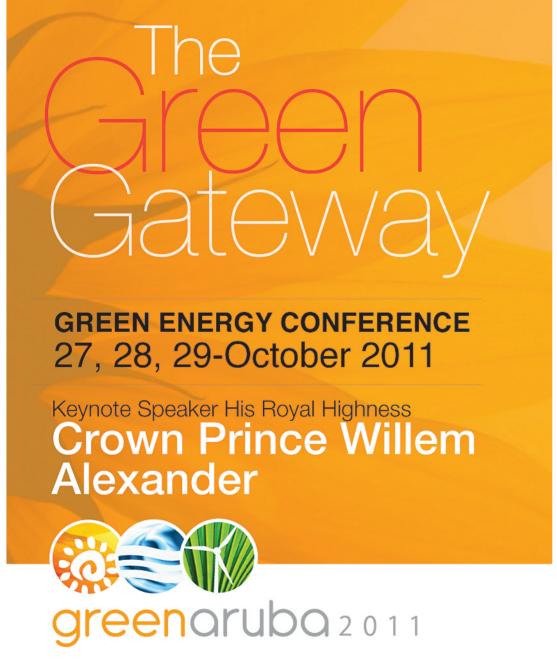

The Cardinals scored 22 runs in the first 19 innings of the post-season series but after the solo homers put St. Louis up 2-0 through three innings Thursday, they couldn't buy a hit going zero-for-eight with runners in scoring position.

"We had a couple of chances to add a run and Wolf made outstanding pitches," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said.

Cardinals left hander Jaime Garcia will square off against Brewers ace Zack Greinke for the second time in the series on Friday.

"If we hadn't won here our season would have been over," Braun said.
